Personal Abuse in the Congressional Campaign.

We take the following article from the York Age:

"There is every indication up to this time that the Republican campaign in the 19th Congressional district is to be conducted upon the principle of the personal abuse and ridicule of Mr. Strubinger, the Democratic candidate, and an attack upon the Catholic church. * *

This vile abuse of the Democratic candidate must be accepted as an evidence that there is no weakness in Mr. Strubinger's armor, and that in the failure of the Republican press to find any substantial flaw in his character or fitness for Congressional honors, they resort to the methods of guerilla warfare by indulgence in ridicule.

And why the Catholic Church or any other church should be dragged into this Congressional election we cannot imagine. Even if Mr. Strubinger were a member of the Catholic church, that would not justify an attack upon his faith. But simply because Mr. Strubinger's mother happens to be a devout Catholic lady, the Catholic religion must be made use of as the club with which to destroy the Democratic candidate, and he and the Catholic church be made the subject of abuse by unscrupulous Republican sectarian editors. These methods are dangerous ones to use and such religious antagonisms are a menace to the peace and security of society.

This is a land of free religious belief. America became the refuge of the Pilgrim fathers fleeing from religious persecution. Here they worshipped God according to the dictates of their own conscience, and ever unmindful of their own sufferings in the old world, they organized a government that forever was to stand as an asylum for the religiously oppressed of all nations. And while the Constitution of our country guarantees free religious belief as one of the inalienable rights of the citizen, Republican editors and their abettors would deny such liberty of conscience and free religious belief regardless of our great magna charta. If we would be true Americans we should be such in every particular, and regard as sacredly the Constitutional rights of the citizen, as we glorify our dear old flag.

We must have no such admixture as politics and religion. No matter whether we are Protestants or Catholics, our religious belief should not interfere with our politics. Politics and religion are not synonomous terms. They have no relation or analogy to each other and to attempt to make the one subservient to the other would become a dangerous weapon in this country. The one treats of things earthly, while the other of things heavenly and holy. Would to God we had more good Protestants and more good Catholics, fewer hypocrites and men without any religion at all or living without the fear of God before their eyes. The country would be the better, infinitely better, if such were the case."

Gone Somewhere.

Shortly after the result of yesterday's caucus was bulletined at the Sun office, a subscriber, a well-known and prominent business man and good Democrat, called in and told the following story which he thought might be found applicable to the case of the House of Representatives, and the entreaties of the people to do something—to extricate the country from the present distress. We give the story in the words of our informant, and leave our readers to make the application. Where "Simon" went the story does not tell—perhaps, into the ranks of the approaching enemy—a case of "surrender."

A REMINISCENCE OF THE CIVIL WAR.

"As we all know horses became very scarce toward the end of the war and as dismounted cavalrymen were sent to the infantry, a remount became a serious question with many troopers. Jim ——, of the Rockbridge troop, had lost his horse, and, unable to get another, possessed himself of a white mule named Simon. Jim became very proud of his mule and was loud in his praises. 'He never gets tired, lives on nothin' and has got more sense than the General,' asserted Jim. But one day a squad was enjoying a dinner with a sympathetic farmer when a sudden alarm was given. 'Run, boys, run; the Yankees are coming.' There was mounting in hot haste and some escaped by the front gate and some by the rear. Jim dashed at the front gate, but Simon, displaying his mule nature for the first time, balked. Jim wheeled him around and drove at the rear gate, but Simon balked again. Poor Jim looked over his shoulder, saw the blue coats rapidly approaching, threw his arms around Simon's neck and called in agonized tones, 'Oh, Simon, for God's sake go somewhere!'"—Balto. Sun.

A Decline in Manners.

The London World laments a great decline in manners, especially on the higher levels. Cads are met with in increasing numbers on society's upper crusts. They are of both sexes and old as well as young. The chaperones in a London ballroom may be seen struggling for seats like semi-rowdies. Two dowagers readily talk across a third sitting between them. Greediness at the supper table is revolting. At the theatres vulgarity is offensive in the stalls and boxes. Young cads lounge on two or three chairs when woman are forced to stand up. They remain seated when a woman enters the room, never open the door for her when she is leaving and pay no heed to their language in her presence.

THE Pullman car company, although it claimed to be doing such poor business as not to be able to pay its employes living wages, managed last week to declare a quarterly dividend of 2 per cent., a rate equal to 8 per cent. a year. This does not indicate that the order for cars has fallen off a great deal, which was given as an excuse for cutting the pay of the workmen. A corporation that is making 8 per cent dividend ought not to be compelled by hard times to gouge their employes in their wages. But it is evident that however poorly the men may fare, the Pullman company is careful to maintain its own profits. Its policy, however, may be to make its profits at the expense of its men.

A THRILLING ADVENTURE.

Two Panthers Follow the Sledges. The Oxen, and How it Ended.

The young people of to-day can scarcely realize what a "straw ride" was like 100 years ago, or that the fun provoking excursion enjoyed so much nowadays had an ancient and necessary origin. It is probable, however, that as much fun and laughter accompanied the straw ride then as now, for young people are alike in all ages and the world over.

When our English forefathers settled first in the New England states, especially Vermont and New Hampshire they established their homes upon the highlands, because, strange as it now seems, the larger lakes, ponds and rivers, where the beautiful meadows now are, were compassed about with miles and miles of thickly wooded swamps, which were almost impassable even in summer.

Last summer I climbed the mountain which is the scene of this story, and I counted there 40 old cellar holes, overgrown with grass and brush, but indisputable evidence of former homes.

I asked stupidly—feeling certain the answer would be, "Killed by Indians or devoured by wild beasts"—"Where did all the people go to who once lived here?" The practical one of our party answered, "Oh, they moved down gradually, for as the woods were cut off the swamps dried up."

There were enough young people to fill two sleds, and Thad. Waldo and Freeman Eddy, each of whom owned two yoke of oxen, were chosen as teamsters. Their sleds were filled with straw and blankets, ready for their respective loads, and they started merrily off at 4 o'clock, reaching their destination before dark. They staid there until 3 in the morning, gayly dancing and feasting, with never a thought of danger.

When the teamsters went out to "tackle up" for the return home, they found the sky heavy with dark clouds and much warmer than when they came over.

"Guess we're going to have our January thaw," remarked young Waldo.

"And I'm afraid we'll get a slump over the south side. It won't be very easy riding over these stumps and stones," returned Eddy.

For a mile or so the high spirit of the party made the woods and mountains ring with song and laughter, but by the time they reached the heights the fatigue of the dance began to tell upon them, and the younger of them commenced making pillows of the laps of their elders, who also soon became silent.

Waldo and Eddy, as they reached the notch, jumped from their sleds to better guide their teams down the mountain, and the latter shouted as he reached the road, "Old Buck and Bright will be more lively company than that sleepy crowd."

The drowsy ripple of laughter which followed this sally was suddenly drowned by a horrible scream which seemed to fairly fill the pass, echoing and re echoing among the mountains as if being answered by a hundred others.

The two teamsters sprang quickly to heads of their teams, now trembling and cuddling up to each other in fright. The men knew that they had but a moment to prevent a wild stampede down the mountain, for as soon as the poor oxen should recover from their first alarm they would seek safety in flight, when it seemed impossible that the whole party could escape being dashed to pieces.

Every person in the company, from the oldest to the youngest, fully appreciated their double danger. They knew that that defiant scream came from a hungry panther—and that it meant death.

Instantly every young man on the sleds had his gun to his shoulder—they never went without them in "those good old days"—peering sharply among the hemlocks which lined the road for the two fiery eyes, the only part of the ugly beast which they expected to see in the cloudy darkness. Failing a shot, they knew that he would jump for them when they passed under the tree where he had lodged, when he gave his warning scream. Should he miss it would in no wise end the chase, for they knew that by his huge vaulting springs he could soon forge ahead to a vantage ground in another tree.

The road through which these hapless young people took their fearful ride is nearly obliterated now by a sturdy growth of young trees, except the Three Ledges around which the road ran. No trees can ever cover those cruel rocks. Here was the fearful climax which must end such a race, even should they keep together until they reached the ledges.

In 30 seconds, quick-witted Waldo had unhitched his leading oxen and turned them into the deep snow, hoping that they might possibly attract the panther. Thus he obtained also a better chance to control the others. By this time a second scream, more defiant than the other, rang through the woods.

This second scream came from behind them over through the notch and was immediately answered by the first, making the poor, trembling oxen fairly bound with fright and this time sending them off on a mad gallop. The teamsters instinctively caught hold of yoke and horn. Young Waldo shouted back to those in the sleds, "hold on for your lives!"

It was an almost useless warning. The young men who had risen were thrown among those who had not, their extended guns dealing cruel blows as they fell. But not a word of fear or complaint was uttered by the hardy settlers, and no sound was heard for a few minutes except Waldo's and Eddy's shouts in the endeavors to check the mad speed of their teams. Yet it seemed to those in the sleds, as they tossed and bounded from side to side, catching and losing their hold upon the stakes, that the next stump or stone must certainly wreck them.

Even the panther was forgotten in their efforts to keep their places, until the chase was freshly announced by the united screams of the panthers, now certainly both behind them. That the oxen had distanced them in their first mad run was plain, but that gave the unfortunate straw riders no hope of an ultimate escape, for they could now count by the screams the rapidly made jumps of their pursuers, which were fast closing in about them.

Waldo's team, though much winded, was running fairly well, through his timely forethought in turning loose his leaders, while Eddy, who had barely time to catch the horn of his near ox, had no control over his leaders, which, in their successive frights at each scream from the panthers, bolted frightfully, adding to their danger as well as lessening their chances of escape by flight.

It would seem that the dangers already surrounding the party could not be increased, but those in the last sled became suddenly aware that Waldo's abandoned leaders were in the road behind them. They recognized the danger immediately and tried, by flinging out their free arms and shouting, to change the course of the pursuing oxen, but the poor, terror blinded creatures plunged straight on, heeding nothing.

There was no time to escape this new danger had the occupants of the sled any strength to do aught but hold on, and each face turned toward the end of the sled awaiting the crash of the galloping hoofs upon the sled boards. But when the shock came it almost seemed that Providence interferred to save them, for only one ox planted his feet over the end board, while the other fell with only his big horns and head inside, where by a miracle they hung, only to be savagely shaken off by the next stump or stone.

The continually nearing screams of the pathers showed that they were still in hot pursuit, and there was a regretful hope in each mind that the poor oxen might not be able to rise, thereby becoming a sacrifice for the safety of the load of human beings clinging to the sled.

Not so, for in a moment, just as a panther sprang from a tree across the road, probably not 50 feet behind the sled, the oxen were in the road again and madder than ever with fright.

Eddy, who had been obliged to look ahead, though comprehending fully all that had occurred behind, knew what the others did not—that Waldo's team must be far ahead, for he had not heard nor seen anything of him for a long time, and they themselves were flying past the Boulder spurs, with the three dangerous ledges less than half a mile beyond.

Turning his face back he shouted hoarsely, "For God's sake, shoot the oxen and be quick about it, for we are nearing the ledges!"

Two shots instantly answered his command, and in the short interval of partial silence that ensued he heard two sounds which, strong, brave men as he was he never forgot and always remembered with a sense of unforgiven cruelty. It was a long, mournful "loo," a pitiful petition for help, as it were, from one of the doomed oxen, and, "Oh, see! The poor thing is dragging his mate!" in a sweet girlish voice. But soon the poor fellow was left far behind, and when they heard the next scream from the pathers an agonized bellow followed, telling of the fate of the oxen.

For a while all believed themselves free from the panthers, and the oxen which were drawing them evidently shared their belief, for they showed signs of slackening speed, though 10 minutes before it had seemed as though nothing could save the party from being swept over the ledges, if carried upon them with such fearful speed. Now all began to hope that the team might be slowed up sufficiently to allow them to jump off. They began to take an interest in young Eddy's efforts to stop his oxen and even noticed that Waldo was not ahead of them. They saw that Eddy was redoubling his efforts to slacken up, with a vigorous use of his thick goad upon the noses of his oxen. The stick had not left his hand in all that terrible ride down the mountain. Then he shouted, "Get ready to jump when I tell you, and jump to the upper side."

A few more cruelly vigorous blows. Then, jerking the head of his near ox sharply round, he cried "Jump!" And with one wild shout the whole sled load landed in a struggling mass in the deep, soft snow.

Young Eddy, when he saw his sled empty, let go his hold upon his oxen and fell backward, through sheer exhaustion, but almost immediately he sprang to his feet again in horror. The worst danger they had been in to-night was upon them, for either one of their former pursuers or an entirely new-comer, had uttered his blood curdling scream just over their heads.

They were in a narrow opening only a few feet from the first ledge, where there was a sheer descent of 60 feet, with a rise of 20 feet of broken rock above them. Nothing could save them now from an encounter with a hungry panther.

The oxen had made but a few staggering bounds away, just to the open ledge, when they were checked and sent huddling and backing upon each other again by the sudden renewal of danger, and the leaders, in their efforts to get back to their human friends, turned completely round upon the other yoke, twisting them until the sled grated over the ledge.

Just for a moment the horrified young people forgot their own danger as they watched the white stripes in the leaders' faces and listened to the sound of the sled runners on the rocky ledge, then another death threatening scream, and a huge body shot through the misty air. There was a frightful bellowing and a short scramble of hoofs. Then sled, oxen and panther disappeared, to be heard from but once more with a crashing thud as they struck the rocks below.

The suppressed feelings of the straw riders found vent this time in a regular stampede for their homes. The girls were crying and sobbing and unconditionally accepted help from the young men. And all, though it was midwinter, forgot completely their lost wraps, caps, hoods and mittens.

All thought for certain that Waldo's team must have gone over the ledge, but only a few of the strongest young men had breath to express their grief or pity. Their surprise and joy were about equal, after they had recovered their breath sufficiently to see, count and remember names, to find in the crowd of settlers coming out to meet them every individual of the first load.

Waldo and Eddy suffered the most from the adventure. Eddy had rheumatic fever. Waldo constituted himself doctor and nurse in general to him, and they talked over many a time the fearful incidents of the ride.

The two places where the oxen fell were made the common hunting grounds of both settlements, and many a panther, wolf and fox were killed there before the winter was through.

In Search of a Wife.

To the Editor:

I am a young man, 28 years of age, nearly six feet in height, weigh 170 lbs., have light hair and mustache, blue eyes and florid complexion. I am by occupation a mechanical engineer, with a steady position at $3,500 a year, and have a bank account of $10,000. I have a collegiate education, and am a man of refined tastes and a great reader—especially of "The Record."

I was born in America, have lived here all of my life, and expect to die here. My object in addressing this letter to you is for the purpose of seeking your advice in the selection of a wife. A man who possesses the superior ability requisite to edit a great journal like "The Record" ought to have no trouble to answer the questions which I am going to ask.

Believing with Lord Byron that,

He who would win
Happiness must share it,
For 'twas born a twin,

I have arrived at the conclusion that a married man makes a much better citizen than a single one; and, with a refined, handsome, educated and faithful wife, why should not a man have a foretaste of heaven on this earth?

But a condition and not a theory confronts me. Where am I going to find that kind of a wife? I want a lady of refined tastes similar to my own—one who is educated and highly accomplished. You will say: "Philadelphia is noted for its pretty girls; take your choice." But to a truly honorable man who means business this answer would seem flippant. My wife must be above all things "as pure as ice and as chaste as snow," and at the same time possess the accomplishments enumerated above. Can you find me such a wife in Philadelphia? Not that I think there are no such women in Philadelphia for there are; but how am I going to meet them when I am not in society?

By a peculiar social code I am debarred from entrance into the exclusive circles of West Walnut street and Rittenhouse Square society. The cultured daughters of the Colonial Dames who reside on these fashionable thoroughfares seem to be reserved by their aristocratic mammas to be given in marriage to titled foreigners; and, consequently, an American sovereign—to my mind the proudest title in the world—stands on an unequal footing with the nobility of the Old World. Let me cite a case in point:

A few years ago I read in "The Record" of the alliance of an American beauty and heiress with a so-called nobleman; and one of the conditions of the marriage was the payment of $100,000 by the young lady's family to discharge the gambling debts of the profligate Count. This young woman's mother would not dream of paying the same amount to an American of honor and intelligence, who would have loved his wife and children, and who would lead a respectable life and be an ornament to society. And why?

I believe that if there were less barter and sale among the ultra-fashionable mammas, and their daughters left to their own selection of a husband, there would be more happier homes and less heart-burnings and disgrace, as brought out in the divorce courts; and that when snobbery gives way to common sense young American womanhood—which is typical of everything that is pure and lovely—instead of being sold to the libertines of Europe to be treated worse than slaves, will regain its proper place in furnishing wives for the gallant sons of this glorious Republic.

Hoping that you will give space to this letter, and that you will kindly answer my queries, I have the honor to be, sir,

Yours very respectfully,
M. E. B.

Philadelphia, August 10.

A man 28 years old, 6 feet high, with light hair and mustache, blue eyes and florid complexion, having a $3,500 salary, $10,000 in bank, a collegiate education and refined tastes, may nevertheless be of infirm temper and bad habits. He may be uglier than a hedge fence, cross-eyed or insufferably self-conceited. The fact that he was born in America, though a fortunate circumstance, does not insure that he will make a proper mate for the refined, handsome, educated and faithful wife he desires to get.

Taking it for granted, however, that our correspondent has those qualifications that go to make what is called a desirable husband, and that he has not already committed himself by falling in love with any maid or widow of his acquaintance, the way before him is as smoth as the slide for a toboggan. The world is all before him where to choose; as it always has been for the sons of men. There are millions of marriageable maids in the country, and thousands in Philadelphia, who can make the heaven on earth desired for our correspondent, or for any other proper man who may be willing and able to bear his share of marital burdens and keep himself as pure and faithful as he desires his wife to be.

The daughters of Colonial Dames who reside on West Walnut street, Rittenhouse Square, or elsewhere, although not more averse than others of their sex to getting married, have no monopoly of charms or refinement. A hook baited with a six-foot 170-pounder of the qualifications and substantial belongings possessed by our correspondent would prove a sure catch, no matter where it should be flung.

A young man 28 years old who has not found some person of the other sex who fills his eye may be congratulated on the joy of pursuit in store for him. It is impossible, however, to make opportunity for any man who will not help himself. We suspect the whole difficulty of our correspondent lies in diffidence. If he be convinced that none other than the daughter of a Colonial Dame will suit him, "The Record" advises him to lay his case before some Colonial Dame who has no daughters. She will take pity on him, if he deserve it, and guide him safely. Her judgment will be almost infallible. European libertines would not carry off half so many of our eligible maids if the latter should be more judiciously and eagerly sought for by native youth. There is no invidious bar between the youth of both sexes in this country that love and intrepidity cannot break down at will. The "society" that seeks to establish any such barrier does not exist, except in the imagination of those who do not appreciate the value of convention—a mere screen to keep the flies out of the house.—*Phila. Buying a Horse.

"I'm thinking of buying a horse," he said airily.

"Um, what kind of a hoss?" inquired the vet, with a faint touch of distrust.

"A riding animal."

"You want a good tall horse for that," suggested the vet as he measured the length of the youth's legs with his eye.

"That's the kind this one is. At least the man from whom I am to get him told me he was. I haven't seen the horse, but the man said he was 16 feet high."

The veteran grew red in the face, as if something was choking him.

"How high did you say?" he asked, gasping.

"The man said 16 feet."

"Sixteen feet? Are you sure he said 'feet?'"

"I'm pretty sure," he answered, doubtfully. "It couldn't be inches, could it?"

"I guess not. Maybe he said 'hands.'"

"Hands—feet—hands—feet," repeated the buyer slowly. "Perhaps it was hands. I knew it was hands or feet or something like that, because it couldn't have been 16 inches, could it?" and the veteran agreed that it wasn't inches.—Detroit Free Press.

Definition of Pretext.

A few evenings ago a little boy was busily engaged at his lessons. His father, one of the leading citizens of Dallas, had gone to the lodge, and his mother was busy sewing. The little boy looked up and asked:

"Mamma, what does the word 'pretext' mean?"

"When your father says he has to go to the lodge two or three times a week, that is a pretext to get away from his family."

The boy did not say anything, but the next day when he read out to a whole school his definition of pretext, he created a sensation.

If an animal enters the winter in a thin or debilitated condition it will cost too much to get it in good health again. Now is the time to feed it liberally.

LIFE SUSTAINING FRUITS.

Thousands of People Live Alone on Dates and Bananas.

In replying to the query of whether there are any fruits which of themselves are sufficient to support healthy life an exchange says: There are many such, among which may be mentioned the date, banana and plantain, figs when dried, the bean of the carob, or locust tree, and the fruit of the bobab, or monkey bread tree, which is eaten by the negroes in West Africa. All these contain sufficient fat, sugar, starch, pecten, gum and nitrogenous matter to support healthy life. Of all these preference must be given to the banana, which supplies to many millions a permanently nutritive food and to the fruit of the date palm, or Phenix dactylifera, which serves as an exclusive article of aliment in parts of North Africa, Arabia and Persia.

"In all Fezzan," says one authority, "the date is the staple food not only for men, but for the camels, horses and dogs. Nineteen-twentieths of the population live on dates alone nine months of the year." In the hadji or pilgrimages the price of dates at Mecca and Medina forms the first question asked between the Arab pilgrims going to and returning from the sacred city. Cakes of dates pounded and kneaded into a solid mass constitute the main nutriment of the caravans crossing the Sahara From the fresh juice of the date wine and also vinegar are made and spirits distilled, while the stones or seeds are roasted and largely used instead of coffee.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

The Antipodean War.

Bad Blood has existed between Japan and China since 1200 but since 1592 there have been no open hostilities. In that year Japan invaded Corea in defense of its citizens, and subjugated the country. About nineteen years ago, Japan took possession of the Island of Formosa, and relinquished it only upon China's payment of $250,000 indemnities to Japanese citizens. In 1882 and 1886, during rebellions in Corea, the inhabitants attacked Japanese citizens without the slightest cause, and have recently repeated such treatment of them. Herein is the primal cause for the present war between Japan and China, for Japan protects her citizens every time she can.

Since the 12th, century, Corea has been a dependency of either China or Japan, whichever nation happened to have possession. It has also been the base of Chinese wars against Japan and Japanese wars against China. Probably more warriors and political adherents have perished on its 79,414 square miles of territory, than upon any other similar area of the world. Dynasties have frequently changed, yet under every form of national government and of conquest, Corea has remained tributary to China, and until 1876 to Japan. This fact explains the present interest of both China and Japan in the peninsula, and the territory becoming the ground for another warfare between the two countries.

China has the advantages in many ways, in the contest just opened by the Japanese sinking the Chinese transport and drowning 1,100 troops. She can get her armies into Corea much more easily and quickly than Japan can, and she can send twenty men to every one that Japan can send. Japan has the advantages only in the intelligence of her soldiers and in their better organization and equipments, they being supplied with the most approved arms, while hundreds of thousands of China's soldiers have still only the primitive bow and arrows. Unless China produces an army of much greater proportions than is anticipated, Japan will drive the Chinese from Corea, whipped, but too dumb to know it.

Of course, the attitude of the great commercial nations is to be considered in this war. England, Germany and the United States will protect their interests and may make demands which will have a material influence on determining the results of hostilities. England is already reported to have sided with China, and the United States have, according to the tenor of Secretary Gresham's note to Japan, which is generally criticised in an adverse manner. These two nations will be closely watched and will closely watch each other. Both are in the Orient for money, and are bound to get it.—Times.

SHE did not love him. She was the proud daughter of a merchant prince.

THE CLEVER CRACKSMAN.

He is Given a Job in His Own Line in an English Prison.

From Secrets of the Prison House.

I was leaving the prison inclosure one day when in charge of the new works at Wormwood Scrubs, and on handing over my keys to the gatekeeper for consignment to the prison safe, he, through some mischance, hampered the safe lock and could not open the safe. I waited some time impatiently, as I was excepted elsewhere, but to no purpose. The safe could not be opened, and until it was not only must I remain on the spot, but so must every other official. It is a strict rule that no one can leave the prison until the keys are collected and safely put away.

At last, in despair, I turned to the chief warder and asked: "Have you any especially good cracksman in custody?"

"There is K, sir," he replied, promptly, "one of the most noted housebreakers in London; doing fifteen years. He is employed at this moment in the carpenter's shop."

"Send for him," I said, and presently K. appeared, under escort, carrying his bag of tools like any British workman arrived to execute repairs.

He was a tall, very dark-haired, rather good looking man, clean, industrious, and an excellent prisoner. "Can you open that safe, K.?" I asked, quietly, when he was marching into the lodge.

"Do you mean it, sir?" he replied, looking at me with an intelligent and irrepressible smile.

"Certainly I do. Examine the door. If you can manage it go ahead."

K. made only a short inspection and then picked up a couple of tools.

"I think I can do it, shall I try?"

I nodded assent and in less than three minutes the safe door swung open: the lock was completely conquered. I will not risk mentioning the names of the makers of the safe, which indeed, I do not remember. But it was a patent and presumably a first-class safe which thus succumbed so easily to the skillful housebreaker.

Fortunately there was an inner smaller safe, which answered all our purposes of security until the outer safe could be properly repaired. As for K., I thanked him and the next time he came with a request for one of the small privileges so coveted by prisoners I think it was not denied him.

A HORSE THIEF.

The Notorious Female Horse-Thief in the Toils Again.

GUTHRIE, O. T., August 8.—Governor Lowe yesterday issued requisition papers on Governor Lewelling, of Kansas, for Mrs. Flora Mundis, alias "Tom King," the notorious female horse-thief, who has been captured at Fredonia, Kan. There are a score of charges against her, and she has broken jail in the Territory half a dozen times.

"Tom King" is a very handsome and fascinating young girl of about 22 years. She is a quarter-blood Cherokee Indian, and many of her relatives and people live near Springfield, Mo., whence her ancestors emigrated to the Cherokee country. Her operations in the Territory have been extensive and notorious and her captures frequent, but she has never yet been brought to trial.

About a year and a half ago she was arrested for complicity in some of the Wharton train robberies, and, after being held in the Guthrie Jail for some time, unaccountably escaped. A while later she was held in the Oklahoma City Jail and thence escaped in the same inexplicable way. For the last three months of last year she had been in the new jail of Canadian county and her trial was to have taken place in the District Court in December.

A few nights before the day fixed for the trial, however, she walked out the open doors of the jail dressed in her ordinary female habiliment, but under which she had taken the precaution to wear her full suit of men's clothing, which the courtesy of the officers allowed her to keep. Outside of the door the skirts disappeared and a very good-looking youthful man, apparently, bestrode a convenient horse and rode safely out of town. It would mystify the most expert to detect the woman in the garb she wore.

The grand jury investigated the case of the escape and a bill was found against one of the deputy sheriffs. It is known that the disappearing officer was much taken with the comely woman. She was being held for horse stealing, at which she was expert, but other charges of horse stealing and train robbery were standing against her, and on all of these she will probably now be brought to trial.—*Phila. The Law of the Dog.

Justice Henry W. Williams, of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, has been looking up the law made and provided in reference to dogs and now we have a decision from the highest judicial tribunal in the Commonwealth on a dog case. The gist of the Supreme Court's deliverance is to establish the fact that under the common law there is no such thing as legal property in a dog, but that the owner of the premises upon which with said owners knowledge and consent a dog is habitually and continuously kept, is responsible for that dogs misdoings.

The dog in the case which occupied the Supreme Court's attention was supposed by the dog's neighbors to belong to a four-year old boy. The boy was the son of a widow, who lived with her brother and kept house for him and the dog lived on the premises. The dog bit a boy who attempted the familiarity of patting his head, and the little sufferer's father determined that someone should pay for the dog's spiteful deed. The case went through a trial by jury, and damages were assessed at $438, which the uncle of the boy who was regarded as the dog's owner was required to pay. The uncle said he would do no such thing, at least until he had ascertained what the Supreme Court of the State had to say. The Supreme Court says that the jury's decision is right. The man who permits a dog to live on his premises is responsible for the mischief done by the dog. It has cost this particular uncle $438 and costs to obtain the knowledge of dog law. It is hereby disseminated to the rest of the population of the State without money and without price.

MARRIED THEMSELVES.

Young People Who Dispensed With the Services of a Preacher or Justice.

In these days when preachers are plenty and justices of the peace and alderman within easy call a marriage ceremony by the contracting parties is not often heard of. Such a ceremony took place in the office of Recorder Hershey on Wednesday. The persons married were John McAlister, a laborer, aged twenty-five years, and Jane Bullington, a housekeeper, aged twenty-two years, both from the upper end of the county. After having secured the necessary license Clerk Witt C. Ronk furnished them with this document.

To John McAlister and Jane Bullington: Legal evidence having been furnished to me in accordance with the act of assembly approved the 23d day of June, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-five, this certifies I am satisfied that there is no legal impediment in you joining yourselves together in marriage. This was signed by the clerk.

Then having announced their intention of becoming husband and wife this certificate was filled and filed with the clerk:

We hereby certify, that on the eight day of August, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-four, we united ourselves in marriage, at Harrisburg, in the county of Dauphin, having first obtained from the clerk of the orphans' court of said county a declaration that he was satisfied there was no existing legal impediment to our so doing.

JOHN MCALISTER.
JANE BULLINGTON.

We, the undersigned, were present at the solemnization of the marriage of John McAlister and Jane Bullington as set forth in the foregoing certificate. This latter portion of the certificate is signed by the witnesses who, in this instance, were clerks in the office.—Harrisburg Patriot.

General News.

A Rock Island railroad train went through a trestle over salt creek, four miles from Lincoln, Neb., on Thursday night. The wreck took fire and was consumed. Twenty-four persons were killed. The women of Pennsylvania are not to be outdone by the men in respect to age. The announcement that the three Winter brothers at Center, Berks county, whose aggregate ages amount to 270 years, are perhaps the oldest in the state, has brought to public notice three aged sisters of Lebanon. They are living at the Fulton House and are: Mrs. Margaret Ewing, aged 92; Mrs. Elizabeth Zell, aged 94, and Mrs. Martha Morrison, aged 97. Their aggregate ages are 283 years, or thirteen more than that of the Winter brothers.

The Keystone Company does not retail, but our local jewelers handle the cases and swear by the thief-proof qualities of the ring. It

How Butter Absorbs Odors.

Patent cars are now supplied to railroads for almost all kinds of freight. A new car, remarkable for its cleanliness, was recently adopted on one road for the transportation of butter. The first carload delivered in New England was refused by the consignee on the ground that the butter was spoiled. The shipper positively asserted that the butter was in first class condition when it left Chicago and the road saw no course but to make good the loss. Before paying the shipper, however, numerous samples of the butter were shipped to a laboratory for analysis. The chemist promptly reported that the butter had absorbed the odor of the shellac on the new car until it was unfit for use. The road changed the painting on the car and suffered no further loss.

TARIFF QUESTION SETTLED

The passage of the Wilson tariff bill settles the tariff policy of this government, not only for this year or next year, or for this administration, but for all time to come, regardless of the mutations of politics. There will be tariff changes made as new necessities and variations in business arise, but the policy of the Wilson tariff bill will never be departed from in the future unless it be to reduce tariff duties

It will be useless for the Republicans to continue the high protection idea. It is dead It has been killed by the direct, unequivocal vote of the people Appearances indicate that the Republicans appreciate this condition as well as do the people, and it appears that they are trying to get into some other line They are for bad money, populistic ideas or anything else by which they think they can win They are between his majesty and the sea

On the tariff all intelligent citizens should be well advised, and all intelligent manufacturers who are looking to government protection should well understand the true situation There will be violent complaint from those who are disappointed in the change of the tariff policy of the government, and there will be bombastic bluster from high tariff organs, but the people of the country have settled the question for all time against taxing the masses for the benefit of classes, and it can never be renewed by any party in the future No matter what party shall control the next administration of this government there will be no material departure from the tariff policy established by the Wilson bill

VOTE FOR THE RIGHT MAN

Democrats of the Nineteenth Congressional District, an opportunity is at hand by which you can materially assist in the advancement and perfection of the system to reform the tariff, reduce taxation and recognize individual rights, by zealously and unceasingly advocating and working for the election of Hon P H Strubinger, our Congressional nominee for this district He is a staunch, earnest advocate of Tariff Reform, and his election will mean the selection of a representative who will give his undivided energies to the promotion of the principles of his party and the careful guardianship of the interests of his constituents Let us make no mistake in the Nineteenth District, so that it cannot be said of us by our neighboring districts that we were derelict in our duty or luke-warm to the principles of our party

IS MILLEISEN FOR CAMERON?

"The question that is most being agitated in our local politics is whether Candidate Alf Milleisen, if elected Senator, will vote to re-elect Senator Don Cameron. And it seems as if the agitation is mostly among the Republicans There is no doubt as to Candidate Duncan's position on that point He will be against Cameron, first, last and all the time He is a Democrat, and Republicans who don't want Senator Cameron re-elected can do some good in that direction by voting for him Take no risks, vote for Duncan "—Carlisle Volunteer

Why does not Mr Milleisen come out and say boldly what his position is concerning Don Cameron. He has been openly asked by the people of Cumberland county, and the people of Adams also have a right to know, whether or not he will vote for Don Cameron He cannot be with the people and with Don at the same time, for their interests are inconsistent If Mr Milleisen is what the Republican organs claim for him let him say like a man what his position is If he does not answer it can be supposed that either he is afraid to express his opinion or else that he is not with the people.

SOUND MONEY

The Democrats of the land are a unit in indorsing the President and honest principles The following is from the platform adopted by the Democrats of Texas

"President Cleveland's administration is indorsed as wise, patriotic and statesmanlike, and the President's action in calling out federal troops to suppress lawlessness during the recent railroad strike was commended."

The financial plank is as follows "We hold to the use of both gold and silver as the standard money of the country and the coinage of both metals without discriminating against either metal on charge for mintage, but the dollar unit of coinage of both metals must be of equal intrinsic and exchangeable value adjusted through international agreement, or by such safeguards of legislation as shall insure the maintenance of the parity of the two metals and the equal power of every dollar at all times in the markets and in payments of debts, and we demand that all paper currency shall be kept at par with and redeemable in such coin."

THE way to prolong business distrust and hesitancy now clearly lies in voting the Republican ticket. No other plan offers by which a renewal of tariff uncertainty can be made to arrest secure and orderly industrial advancement.

CLEAN THE STREETS

It is a duty of the Town Council to keep the town in a healthful condition One of the requisites of such a condition is clean streets. The business portions of town have been for the past week so very filthy as to actually cause a stench, not only disagreeable but dangerous At this season of the year especially should great care be taken to keep the town clean and consequently healthy No citizen has the right to endanger the health of the borough by keeping on his premises or throwing on the highway decayed vegetable or such refuse matter as may create disease Clean the streets

DEMOCRATS, are you actively at work for your whole ticket? Are you watching the sly game of the enemy? If not, fall into line now and keep at it persistently from now until the election

THE HONOR LOST.

The conferrees of the Adams Fulton judicial district met in Chambersburg They were in session for several days Fulton county had its candidate and quite a number of ballots were taken before ex-Judge David Wills was nominated Both candidates were on the ground urging their claims, and after his nomination ex Judge Wills was called before the conferrees and made an address. Under these circumstances we are surprised that the Press speaks so highly of ex-Judge Wills The man sought the nomination and not the nomination the man Under such circumstances the honor is lost sight of in the salary and the judgeship becomes a mere political office, worth only what it pays Of late years candidates for positions on the Supreme Bench and in the lower courts have actively canvassed for their nomination and election, and the position has been largely deprived of the honor which ought to belong to it Ex-Judge Wills is entitled to no more credit than the nominee for any other political office, who has obtained the nomination by ordinary political methods —Carlisle Herald

AN EXCHANGE has the right idea about a town It says

"A perfect town is one where farmers patronize the home merchant, the merchant advertises in the local papers, the laborers spend the money they earn with their own tradesmen, and all are animated by a determination not to purchase articles abroad if they can get them at home The spirit of reciprocity between business men and laborers, farmers and manufacturers, results every time in making the town a satisfactory one to do business in "

A HIGH COMPLIMENT

Few public men stand higher in this country with those of wisest censure than William L Wilson, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee He is honored not alone for his marked ability and equipment for the treatment of all economic questions, but on personal grounds, and because of his manliness sincerity and courage has a warm place in the affections of the American people and one not bounded by party lines As an evidence of this we have the testimony of Hon W M Dawson, the chairman of the Republican state committee of West Virginia, whose principal business at this time is to discover someone who can successfully contest Mr Wilson's district Interviewed as to the prospect of defeating Mr Wilson, Mr Dawson was by no means confident, and declared that "Mr Wilson is a sincere believer in a low tariff, and his sincerity and ability make it more necessary that he be defeated for a less able and earnest man could not do us as much harm as he " By "us" Mr Dawson probably meant the trusts and combines that flourish under the tender care and protection of McKinleyism The admission of the Republican chairman that Mr Wilson must be beaten because "his sincerity and ability" make him a dangerous man to the trusts is one that the Democracy of the Second West Virginia district should take well to heart No higher compliment could be paid a public man —Pittsburg Post

THE COMPILER FOR THE CAMPAIGN FOR 25 CENTS

AN EYE OPENER FOR THE FARMERS

From the Williamsport Sun

The farmer who is selling or trying to sell his wheat at sixty cents a bushel is beginning to realize the truth of the statement made by the late James G Blaine, who said that the McKinley law would not open a foreign market to another pound of American pork or another barrel of American flour Without a foreign market for these products, the American farmer is forced to see his wheat rot in the granaries or feed it to the hogs And all this is the result of the high protection given American industries under the McKinley law In the eyes of the Republican leaders farmers' interests are not worth considering

COLORED DEMOCRATS

The colored Democrats of Indianapolis agree upon a platform containing the following

"The negro National Democratic League, in national conference assembled, reaffirms and indorses all the principles laid down in the platform of the Democratic party in National Convention assembled in Chicago in 1892, be lieving that those principles embody comprehensively the rights and immunities of every citizen without regard to race, color, or previous condition.

"We believe the irrepressible conflicts in the South have been brought about by the unwise policy of the Republican party in arraying the race against each other, solidifying the colored vote by appealing to false issues long since abortive within themselves, refusing to give to the free man the right of thought in politics without branding him with epithets, making him a marked subject for social and religious ostracism, and making his ballot a machine rather than an individual expression of the vote of a free citizen "

Our Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, Aug 17, 1894

Editors of Compiler: President Cleveland does not like the Senate tariff bill any better than he did when he wrote that letter to Chairman Wilson—few good Democrats do—but, like the sensible man that he is, he prefers it to the McKinley law, and has, according to the best obtainable information, made up his mind that it shall become a law, but has not yet fully decided whether he will sign it or allow it to become a law without his signature, nor whether he will send another special message to Congress on the subject, urging the passage at this session of the separate House bills providing for free coal, iron ore and barbed wire. So far as the action of the Senate is concerned, it makes little difference what the President may do, as enough Republican Senators have gone away from Washington to break a quorum and they left for that very purpose, so as to make sure that the Senate could not pass any other tariff bills

Secretary Carlisle has written a letter to Senator Harris, showing that the revenue to be derived from the tariff on sugar is absolutely necessary to avoid a deficit in the Treasury for this fiscal year, and stating that if the bill for free sugar, which passed the House with only 11 opposing votes, is passed by the Senate, some other bill to raise the $430,000,000 which it is estimated will be collected on foreign sugar must also be passed, That letter has made the passing of the free sugar bill out of the question, even if the Senate were in a position to do it, notwithstanding the fact that a majority of the Senate favors free sugar Secretary Carlisle's letter contained the latest revised estimates of the revenues of the government under the Senate tariff bill The total estimated receipts are $378 000,000, and the expenditures, $363 000,000. An estimated surplus of $15,000,000 is entirely to small to stand any further reduction

The wisdom of the House in accepting the Senate amendments to the tariff bill, although it involved a seeming surrender on the part of the House, is becoming more apparent every day It is now clear as day that there was a plot to prevent any tariff legislation at all and that only the prompt action of the House Democratic caucus prevented its being carried out Had Senator Hill's resolution directing the Senate conferees to report a disagreement to the Senate been adopted before the House acted, it would have been followed by a motion to postpone the whole matter until next December, and the motion would have been carried Senator Vest in a speech defending the Senate from the numerous charges made against it in connection with tariff legislation, said "Men said the question was between the Wilson bill and the Senate bill That statement was is false as the assertion that this was a Democratic Senate On the question of tariff reform it never was and never can be a Democratic Senate as at present constituted The question was between the Senate bill and the McKinley law There the choice was to be made and every one conversant with the situation knew it " That is as plain is it could be made

Senator Walsh is a good Democrat and editor Hence his advice is good He says "The Democratic press should use its influence to create a just public opinion as to the real merits of the Senate bill When properly presented as the best measure of tariff reform attainable, the conservative sentiment of the country will settle down to the conviction that very substantial progress has been made in the direction of real tariff reform and freer trade among nations " That is the proper way to look at it The Senate bill is a great improvement on the McKinley law

Representative Breckinridge, of Arkansas is resigned his seat in the House this week and was qualified as Minister to Russia, to which position he was nominated and confirmed some weeks ago Minister Breckenridge expects to start for Europe in a few days, but he will travel leisurely, stopping at a number of places, and does not expect to reach St Petersburg until about October 15

Managers of the Presidential boom of Senator Cameron are hard at work trying to get their grip upon the American Bimetallic League, which is this week holding a conference here, but they haven't met with much success Even the Republican members of the League are not solidly for Cameron, and he has few supporters among the populist members and none among the Democrats There is no longer the slightest doubt about Cameron being in the field for the Republican nomination, his claim being based solely upon his friendship for silver and his willingness to pay for support

Wheat-fed Hogs.

A leading pork butcher who has just returned from the West said that, in his opinion, pork would begin high this fall but would be cheaper than it had been for years before the winter is over When asked if the shortage in corn would not affect pork he said, in his opinion it would not, because the farmers of the West are feeding wheat to their hogs

Wheat in the West, he said, is cheaper than corn and a bushel of wheat makes more and better pork than a bushel of corn This feeding of wheat to hogs, he said, would probably have an effect on the grain markets also —Wilmington News

Oldest Citizen Dead.

Judge Samuel R Russell, the oldest and one of the best known and respected citizens of Gettysburg died on Wednesday morning Though for some years suffering from the weakness of extreme age he was not confined to his house or bed for any considerable time and death came as peacefully as a sleep He was born June 21st 1801 in the same house in which he died and where he has lived most of his long life He was the second son of Alexander and Mary Russell, of Irish descent and the last of the family Before reaching his majority he went to Bedford county where he read law with his brother, James W and was admitted to the Bar in 182 Returning to his native county, he practiced law until 1851, when he was elected an Associate Judge and served the term of five years From that time until his death he has lived a retired life, his only public position being that of President of the Adams County Mutual Fire Insurance Company Few of our citizens, old or young, will soon forget the familiar face and genial disposition of Judge Russell He was a man of broad and liberal education conversant with all the topics of the day of exceptional gentlemanly bearing The deceased's declining years had been made comfortable and pleasant by the kindly attentions of those close about him

A meeting of the Bar to take appropriate action was held on Friday afternoon, at 2 o'clock On motion of Mr McConaughy Judge McClean was called to the chair and John B McPherson was made Secretary

On taking the chair, Judge McClean spoke of the deceased as a remarkable example of longevity, of his character his high standing as a Judge and lawyer who upheld the dignity and honor of the profession He also referred to his exemplary life and his reputation for integrity and said all had lost a valued friend Mr McConaughy referred to his constant and regular attendance and interest in the proceedings of Court as well as of his own intimate social relations with Judge Russell

Mr Wills spoke of the deceased as the last of his family that he felt his loneliness in recent years and was ready to leave this world whenever he might be called He alluded to his devotion to church duties and of their pleasant business relations

Messrs McSherry and Wm Arch McClean, representing the younger members of the Bar paid tribute to his affability and general intelligence

It was resolved that the members of the Bar and Court officers attend the funeral in a body, that the proceedings of the meeting be entered on the Court records as a minute and a copy furnished each of the town papers for publication

Cold Springs Work.

Dr I J Wolf who spent last Saturday and Sunday in the Cold Spring region asks us to say that the two students who are engaged in evangelistic labors in that community are doing an excellent work a work that must by all means be continued after the present laborers return to the Seminary At a woods meeting held on Saturday at Cold Spring, addresses were made by Revs Kaiser Schearer and Wolf and the latter preached at two different places on Sunday having a larger audience at night than usually assembles for evening worship in Gettysburg churches Dr Wolf found poverty ignorance and degradation, but also some quite respectable families who would be a credit to any community The people there have for years had hardly any religious privileges and many of them cannot even read

Potatoes Will Be Scarce

Recent reports from the Department of Agriculture at Washington show that there has been a very heavy decline in the potato crop this season For the month of July the estimate decline or depreciation in the crop was 18 per cent This is an uncommonly heavy decline in fact it is the greatest ever recorded in a single month

The chief cause of this falling off is the prolonged and widespread drought under which the country has suffered this season On account of the depreciation it is probable that the price of potatoes will be considerably advanced Already the scarcity has been felt and wholesale dealers have raised the price to $2 75 a barrel This is $1 25 more or nearly double the opening price for the early native crop report which sold for $1 50 a barrel Those who buy potatoes at retail must pay from $3 to $3 50 a barrel for them

Inspections and Drills Governor's Day Grand Review 15 000 Visitors Departure of the Troops

Camp Crawford which has been the attraction of our citizens as well as thousands of visitors for a week is a thing of the past The inspections and reviews of the various commands occupied all of Monday Tuesday and Wednesday and from 6 in the morning until dark the large parade ground was occupied by the troops going through the evolutions in presence of Gov Pattison, Gen Snowden and other officers including the representatives of the U S government The marked improvement of the Guard both in drilling and general appearance was a source of congratulation Each day thousands of spectators witnessed the fine display and in the evenings enjoyed the dress parades and fine concerts by the bands in camp The rain of Sunday made and on Monday but that soon disappeared and the camp and parade ground were in the best possible condition the rest of the week

The crowd of visitors on Wednesday was high in the thousands and camp crowded most of the day At noon Governor R J Reynolds of Delaware arrived and was escorted to camp by the City Troop and Governor's Troop Among other distinguished guests were Hon Wm F Harrity Attorney General Hensel, State Chairman Strand in Gen Hastings and others prominent in military and political circles

Thursday the big day of the week attracted the largest crowd each of the railroads bringing over three thousand people the town and surrounding country contributing thousands more, making the number of spectators at headquarters and at different other points fully fifteen thousand

While the people were waiting for the grand review which occurred at 3 o'clock they were treated to a drill by the Regulars Troop of the Seventh Cavalry and Battery C of the Third Artillery It was an object lesson to the mounted troops of the State Guard and had been arranged by Major ... and Captain [illegible] ... The amount of food consumed during the eight days gives some idea of how much it takes to feed such a large body of men Lieutenant Colonel Austin Curtin, division commissary, has personally superintended the issuing of the rations and he furnished these figures Fresh beef 54,000 pounds mess beef, 6 000 pounds ham, 11 000 pounds soft bread 42,000 pounds hard bread, 18 900 pounds, coffee 7,100 sugar 10,050 pounds, soap, 2 400 pounds candles 740 pounds salt 2 400 pounds pepper, 164 pound potatoes 00 000 pounds tomatoes, 2010 gallons, canned corn 4 080 two pound cans The rations as divided among the men, gave one and a quarter pounds of fresh beef per man per day for five days three quarters of a pound of ham per man per day for three days one pound of fresh bread per man per day for five days and three-quarters of a pound of hard bread per man per day for three days

Assistant Secretary of War Doe who was formerly adjutant general of Wisconsin was greatly impressed with what he saw He said that the National Guards was a hobby of his and that Adjutant General Greenland was a friend of the State troops and will do all in his power to aid its efficiency General Doe was delighted with the site of the camp and thoroughly pleased at the military bearing of the men whom he considered soldiers

General Sunders Inspector General of Maryland, who is a West Point graduate came here to get points to use at home His talk of the Pennsylvania Guard is of the most flattering description and he considers both the guard and its system the best in the country and one which can teach the others how an effective and mobile citizen soldiery can be maintained

Friday was devoted to drilling by regiments and brigades, followed by dress parade in the evening

Friday evening the last in camp was looked forward to by many of the soldiers as the occasion for sport in town and in camp but Col Green the Provost, kept up the rigid discipline with which he started out on Saturday morning and for which he has been complimented on all sides All through the week guards have occupied the streets and all soldiers without passes were sent back to camp or taken to the guard house Ordinarily one company of infantry preserved order, but on Friday night four companies of the First Brigade were on duty, while detachments of cavalry did duty on the suburbs

As the troops of the Second Brigade had the greatest distance to travel, the schedule was arranged to send them out first On account of the death of the 14th regiment's commander, Col Perchment at Pittsburg on Thursday morning, and for which the regimental flag was in mourning during the review, they were sent first in order to reach home in time to attend his funeral The large body of troops to be moved and the limited facilities caused considerable detention and all of Friday night and most of Saturday was consumed in getting out the trains Several of the Philadelphia regiments were marched to town and loaded at the W M R R depot, thus relieving the pressure on the camp switches The last to leave were the Regulars who loaded at the W M yards and left at 10 0 Sunday morning thus closing the camp Staff officers remained until yesterday directing the packing and loading of the tents etc which was done by employes of the State arsenal

The department officers expressed themselves as highly pleased with the entire encampment and especially with the water supply which they pronounced the best in the abundant and purest ... in any division encampment yet held Gettysburg is now except ... Corn A Failure

The damage to the corn crop in parts of Kansas and Nebraska is so great that the St Joseph and Grand Island Railroad has issued orders for the abandonment of over a dozen stations on its lines The officers of the road say the stations are not abandoned permanently although there is little probability of their being reopened until another crop is assured The people along the line in the sections where the stations are closed depended almost entirely on the corn crop and now are leaving in great numbers and there is absolutely no business for the railroads

A Mad Dog's Career

A dog belonging to Mr Ezra Stuller of Fairview district created a sensation in Littlestown by appearing in that place while laboring under a fit of rabies, and biting a number of dogs He then returned to Mr Stuller and accompanied the children as they drove the cows to water showing no signs of madness although he bit one of the cows During the following night however hydrophobic spasms returned and he managed to escape from confinement and ran amuck through the country biting many dogs and cattle Some of the bitten dogs and stock were killed at once —Emmitsburg Chronicle

Farm Notes.

Go into the cornfield and fasten a strip on the most vigorous stalks which contain the best ears. The proper time for selecting seed corn for next year is when the crop is growing, for then the condition and progress of the whole plant can be observed.

Do not burn anything that can be added to the manure heap with advantage, or which can be plowed under. When a substance is destroyed by fire only the mineral matter remains. Exception may be made to this rule, however, if it is intended to destroy destructive insects, for which purpose all heaps of rubbish should be burned.

Onions will not be grown until next spring, but the best time to prepare the onion ground is in the fall. Plow the plot, spread manure thickly and harrow it in. The land will be in prime condition for the crop when the onion season comes.

It would be dollars in our pockets to tax ourselves heavily for good roads. Markets would be open to us all times of the year; we could haul our supplies at less expense; there would be less wear and tear on wagons and injury to horses; the church, the school and the doctor would not be so far away; the members of the agricultural community would be brought closer together, and a more intimate social intercourse would result.

That man who is known to have nothing but good stock, of whatever variety, will never have much trouble in finding buyers or in getting good prices. Moreover, he influences the market, and people will be more ready to buy mutton, pork or beef if their taste have been satisfied with a good quality.

It is a pretty heavy drain on a farmer to carry several head of idle horses through a long winter. If these are all good brood mares, raising colts to pay their way, it is not so bad. It does not take long for an idle animal to eat his head off. Figure it out, or sell it at some price, and save the oats and figuring.

M. A. Thayer says that berry vines, canes and fruit buds grown this season produce fruit next year and die. This year's growth of plants and buds, then, practically decided the quantity and quality of fruit that may be expected next year. For this reason the most vigorous plants should be used in the beginning.

Mulching is becoming more generally recognized as a good practice, not only with small fruits, but with vegetables, for the purpose of keeping the soil cool during the dry weather of late summer. Cucumbers, tomatoes, melons and squash are benefited by being mulched after the last cultivation.

Poultry that is to be used on the table, if confined and fed on corn and clean water a few days, will be found to have the flesh sweet, juicy and tender.

The fruit trees planted in the fall will do better than when heeled in during the winter season, in case the planting is well done. There will get an early start in the spring, when most of the farm work is hurrying.

A thin horse added 100 pounds to his weight in a month when fed three pints of molasses on clover hay daily. There is danger of resultant indigestion, and care must be taken, but it will make horses sleek and fat.

Do not be afraid of overdoing the poultry business, for eggs are imported into this country every year, and neither the egg nor poultry market has ever been known to be glutted.

The Ohio Experiment Station says that the best of old varieties of strawberries are Warfield, Bubach, Crescent and Haverland, and no variety seems to have been found that is likely to supercede them.

If you can grow any meat at a profit it is lamb. It is universally considered a delicacy, and brings the highest price of all our meats.

Black knot on plum and cherry trees prevails wherever those trees are grown. It can be prevented if all fruit growers will work together to extripate it. Ohio has a law against it, which should prove beneficial. It is as much a matter of legislation as the destruction of thistles, against which many of the States have passed laws, making it an offense to allow them to grow.

Owing to the neglect of the apple crop in the East, California has given apples her attention, and begins shipment of them this year for the first time.

Droughts have prevailed both this year and last. Up to the period of the excessive rains of last May the rainfall during the winter, which is then usually most abundant in this section, was not up to the average. Since the overpour of rain the season has been very dry, and the beginning of August is about the time for breaking the drought, which sometimes extends through July. The drought prevails in those sections this season where there is the least timber. There is room for investigation in the matter of the prolonged drought this season.

In New England cucumbers for pickling make an important crop, in one section as much as 4000 acres having been planted. The price obtained is about 50 cents per bushel. They are picked when very small and put up in jars.

Cut back the young raspberry canes when they are three feet high and they will have stronger branches than if cut back when full grown.

Celery plants will not stand drought. If the plot is a small one, and will not entail too much labor by so doing, use the soapsuds from the family washing along the rows. Soapsuds are beneficial to both celery and asparagus.

Try sowing crimson clover this month as an experiment. It will grow on light or heavy soil. Brush the seed in, and use plenty of it. The best fertilizer for it at this season is wood ashes or lime.

The skim milk from one cow is estimated to be worth $20 a year. So far as its actual proportion of nutritious matter is concerned it is more valuable than cream, because it contains the protein and mineral matter. Its value on the farm depends on the use to which it is applied. It should furnish sustenance for two pigs in a year if used in connection with clover and grain.

A Great Many Children —have been cured of scrofula and other skin diseases—as well as thousands of grown people, by taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Every disorder that can be reached through the blood, yields to its purifying qualities. Besides, it builds up wholesome flesh and strength; not merely fat like Cod liver oils. A scrofulous condition of the blood invites Catarrh, Bronchitis and Consumption. We're all exposed to the germs of consumption, grip, or malaria—yet only the weak ones suffer. When you're weak, tired out, and debilitated, or when pimples and blotches appear—heed the warning in time. The "Discovery" sets all the organs into healthy action—especially the liver, for that's the point of entrance for these germs, then if the blood is pure, they'll be thrown off. There's no risk. If it fails to benefit or cure in all cases of impure blood or inactive liver, your money is returned.

HOGS, CORN AND CASH.

The Swine as a Factor in American Agricultural Prosperity.

Never has the value of the hog crop to American farmers been more strikingly demonstrated than during the past 12 months. Throughout those long and anxious weeks of 1893, when bursting banks and financial wrecks were sweeping away millions every day, and during all the depression of the first half of 1894 good hogs were being grown, shipped to market and turned into cash in such astonishing numbers as to keep a veritable Niagara of hard cash—ready money—flowing out from the purses of packers and shippers into the pockets of western farmers, and this enormous quantity of pork has been produced at such a comparatively small cost that almost every pound of it has been sold—even through the very worst of the financial cyclone—at an actual profit to the producer. Can this be said of any other variety of live stock or of any crop of grain that has been on sale during this same value destroying period?

The simple fact is that the farmers of the west who live in sections where the corn crop never fails and rarely falls below an average yield have in this field of pork production a business which in their hands is surrounded by so many outstanding advantages that they can safely challenge the competition of the world. Myriad acres of land elsewhere can contribute toward swelling the volume of cattle, sheep and horses. India, Russia and Argentine can grow wheat so cheaply and in such quantities as to fairly ruin the American farmer who attempts to compete, but the sun does not shine on any land that produces the hog's own feed—Indian corn—in such lavish abundance, that has such perfect transportation and market facilities, such admirable packing plants, as these central western states. The hog is the one reliable money maker, the "rent payer," the "breadwinner," the "mortgage lifter" par excellence of the corn states. He may make more money for his owner some years than others. He may be overtaken at time by disease, but in the long run he always pays a handsome profit in any corn growing district. Other countries may grow "pigs" in comparatively small numbers, but nowhere outside of the United States can hogs making such astonishing weights at such an early age or be produced in such enormous numbers at such slight cost. Only two weeks ago there were over 300,000 head bought and paid for at four primary receiving points in six days, and even that great "run" was absorbed without a break. There is no overestimating the importance of the hog crop as a leading factor in American agricultural prosperity. We have virtually a monopoly of the world's markets so far as cheap pork of fine quality is concerned and should make the most of it.—Breeder's Gazette.

Peaches and Potash.

Mr. Smith, who has been detailed by the Agricultural Department for a number of years to investigate the cause of the so-called "yellows" in peach trees and to devise a remedy has, after years of practical work, given up in despair. That the disease is accompanied by multitudes of bacterial forms is evident, but that any of these organisms are the direct cause of the disease has not been proved. No remedy has yet been proved. No remedy has yet been found for a tree really attacked by the yellows, and the axe and the fine saw seem the only means of checking it. But in all the peach-growing districts there are thousands of unhealthy yellow looking trees that some have assumed to have the disease. But their condition is really due to the ravages of the root aphis or to exhaustion of the soil of elements needed for the successful growth of the trees. Now in all of our coast country the great lack of the old cultivated soils, and in fact, of all our coast soils, is potash.

It is well known that all fruit trees are large users of potash, and when by their continued growth they have drawn heavily upon the supply, already scanty, in these light soils, the trees suffer from the lack, and the careless observer at once says "yellows," while really the trouble is starvation. Now it is also well known that trees and plants of any kind when in the weakened growth are more readily attacked by insects. And when millions of root aphis begin to feed upon the roots of the already weakened tree and it gets yellow and dies the folk who cannot diagnose a disease correctly, says it is a sure case of "yellows." Now while a liberal use of potash may not check a genuine case of yellows, it it certain that dressing of kainit or muriate of potash will bring into thrifty growth thousands of yellow, sickly trees that are only being starved, and will put them in a condition to resist the insect attacks, or even to resist the real disease.

That soil conditions have a good deal to do with the peach yellows is evident. Several years ago when at the University of Illinois, Prof. Burrill showed me a tree which he had brought from New Jersey, with all the evidences of an advanced stage of yellows. I saw it in the autumn after it had been one summer planted in the rich black prairie soil. It had started a staunch and healthy growth, instead of the wiry twigs on it when it came, and was evidently growing out of it. Prof. B. showed me a lot of healthy peach trees which he said he had vainly tried to inoculate from the diseased tree. But the disease would not go on in the soil. Of course I know it is an old story that potash will cure a diseased tree, but I am more and more convinced that there would be less of yellows if kainit were freely used upon peach orchards. It may not cure a diseased tree, but a plentiful supply of potash will keep the tree in such robust health that that disease will have little chance at them.—Country Gentleman.

The young suckers, or shoots, which start up at the base of a young tree, deprive the tree of its nourishment, and they should be removed as soon as they appear. If this is done by observing the trees daily they can be rubbed off with the hand. A great many young trees are stunted by allowing shoots from the roots to grow to the height of a foot or more before they are cut away.

A good start for a young animal is important. It should not be compelled to procure all of its food from the pasture. A ration of ground oats at night will be found an economical way of keeping it growing and in good condition.

SHERIDAN'S Condition POWDER

Keep Chickens Strong

and healthy; it gets your pullets to laying early, it is worth its weight in gold when hens moult; it prevents all disease, Cholera, Roup, Diarrhoea, Leg-weakness. It is a powerful food digestive. Large cans are most economical to buy.

NOTHING ON EARTH WILL MAKE HENS LAY LIKE SHERIDAN'S CONDITION POWDER

Therefore, no matter what kind of feed you use, mix with it daily Sheridan's Powder. Otherwise, your profit this fall and winter will be lost when the price for eggs is very high. It assures perfect assimilation of the food elements needed to produce health and form eggs.

It is absolutely pure; highly concentrated, therefore used in small doses; no other kind one fourth as strong. In quantity it costs less than one-tenth of a cent a day per hen. "One large can saved me $40; sent six more to prevent roup this winter" says a customer. Sold by druggists, grocers and feed dealers. No other ever made like it.

If You Can't Get it Near Home, Send to Us. Ask First.

We send postpaid one pack for 25c.; Five $1. One large can $1.20. Six cans $5, express paid. Sample copy of "the best poultry paper published" sent free. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., 22 Custom House Street, Boston, Mass.

Is the only vegetable substitute for that dangerous mineral, MERCURY, and while its action as a curative is fully equal, it possesses none of the perilous effects.

In Constipation, Mandrake acts upon the bowels without disposing them to subsequent Costiveness.

No remedy acts so directly on the liver, nothing so speedily cures Sick Headache, Sour Stomach and Biliousness as these
